Giclée Printing

Giclée printing is a high-quality digital printing technique used to reproduce fine art prints.

This involves using specialised printers that use archival inks and fine art papers or canvases to produce prints that closely resemble the original artwork.

This makes giclée prints a popular choice among artists, collectors, and art enthusiasts who value the longevity and quality of fine art reproductions.

Art Reproductions

Art reproduction involves creating digital copies of original artworks, making art more accessible and preserving the original. This process starts with high-resolution scanning. Using editing software for colour correction and image refinement.

This benefits artists by expanding their audience, providing a potential income stream. It also allows artists to sell affordable versions of their art without parting with the original piece, enhancing visibility and making art more accessible to a wider audience.

Resolution: Make sure the digital file or image you are printing has a high enough resolution. Higher resolution means more details and sharper prints which are ideally needed to class as Giclée prints.

File Format: Choose the appropriate file format for printing. You can use formats like JPEG or PNG, but be mindful of compression artefacts that can occur if re-sized incorrectly.

Bleed and Margins: If your design or image extends to the edge of the paper, we will ask for details on your desired margin (for example: extra image area for artists signatures or framing purposes).

Listed are standard paper sizes, but we will happily print your images to a specific size within the A2 parameters. Please ensure you take into account what unprinted margin(s) you may need. (e.g for signature and framing). There are no set-up fees, provided your digital files meet the requirements of your size and paper choices.
